UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE BOARD 19 February 1963

OFFICE OF THE CHAIRMAN

MEMORANDUM FOR THE UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE BOARD

SUBJECT: NASA Assistance to the Intelligence Community

1. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has expressed a strong desire to assist the intelligence community in those areas related to their operational responsibilities in which they have a significant contribution to make. Their principal area of interest is that covered by the Guided Missile and Astronautics Intelligence Committee (GMAIC) of the U. S. Intelligence Board, and I propose to invite NASA to send a fully accredited, voting member to GMAIC. Of course, there will also be times when NASA will wish to present matters of broader concern to the USIB itself, and I would invite them to do so.

2. Accordingly, I am asking the Executive Secretary to take appropriate action to revise, with the concurrence of the USIB members, the existing directive on the membership of GMAIC.

3. For its part, NASA proposes to make its considerable technical resources available for the solution of intelligence problems. Their resources are extensive and in some cases unique, and should contribute both to the analysis and evaluation of intelligence data. They propose to bring these technical resources to bear on a selective basis, starting with a small analysis group drawn from the APOLLO (manned lunar landing) office. Other NASA centers and activities will participate as required to study specific scientific and technological matters.

4. The Central Intelligence Agency will undertake to provide facilities for this initial group at Langley, and will support the development of an appropriate security program within NASA which will facilitate the participation of other centers and individuals when required.
